THINK ABOUT LIFE...

“Every child a wanted child.” This is a popular slogan in the abortion industry. At first glance, it sounds like a great argument. Shouldn't every child be loved and wanted? Of course. But people who make this argument to support abortion are suggesting that children who are not loved and not wanted should be killed. This is not only illogical, it is cruel. And the message is directed at the wrong people.

If a baby in the womb is not loved or wanted, who has the defect – the baby or the rest of us? Obviously, the problem is with those of us who have not learned how to truly love as Christians should. Why should we make it legal to kill babies just because the people who are supposed to be protecting them do not know how to love? When we hear a news story about a child who was harmed by a parent or guardian who did not love or want that child, our first instinct is not to say, “Oh, dear... Somebody should really end that child’s life so that he doesn’t have to be unwanted and unloved.” Rather, our hearts break for that child, and we want to take him away and love him ourselves.

When people don’t love a child that they conceive, a better solution would be to help them learn how to love, or to place that child with adoptive parents who can provide the love and care that every child deserves. Killing children is certainly not the solution to our inability to love. It’s a symptom of our inability to love.

Furthermore, many children started out very unwanted by their parents; but then, after birth, their parents had a change of heart and found that they loved and wanted their children very much. People who work at pregnancy resource centers (also called “crisis pregnancy centers”) can recount many such stories, and there are numerous women (and men!) who are willing to give testimonies of their change of heart.

Some people claim that abortion can be the most “loving” thing to do for a child. Margaret Sanger, the founder of Planned Parenthood, once said, “The most merciful thing that the large family does to one of its infant members is to kill it.”¹ In other words, Sanger suggests that it can be loving to kill your newborn baby if your family is big. This is definitely not a Christian view of love.

As Christians, we believe that we should do everything possible to care for every child, even if it means sacrificing ourselves. That’s not easy to do, but it’s our purpose in life. This is why we were created. God did not make you for yourself. You were made to be a hero to others. We were all made to give ourselves as gifts to others. God made us for agape, and when we love others that way, we will find happiness. Some of us will be called to do that in small ways. Others will be called to do it in very big ways. Do not be afraid of the ways that you will be called to sacrifice for other people – including for unborn children. Agape is where we discover all of the things that truly make life worth living.

A MESSAGE FROM THE HOSPITALITY MINISTRY

John Paul II writes, "Welcoming our brothers and sisters with care and willingness must not be limited to extraordinary occasions but must become for all believers a habit of service in their daily lives."

You can be the face of Guardian Angels' Hospitality by volunteering with your family, your ministry, or small group members to serve coffee and donuts after Sunday 8 and 10 a.m. Masses. Maybe you want to sign up for a regular Sunday time like the Knights of Columbus who serve every 3rd Sunday. Or you can pick a couple of dates when it is convenient for you.

Call or text (612) 201-7449 (Ken Forner) or (612) 201-7002 (Laurie Forner) if you would like to support our Sunday Hospitality.

START THINKING ABOUT THIS FALL

Summer is a fantastic season we should fully enjoy as we do not always have this lovely weather here in Minnesota! However, here at the end of July it is not too early to start thinking about this fall. As you print out your kids' school supply lists (do people still print them out these days?), you should also get out your calendar. The sign up periods for many ministries are opening up in the next couple of months. Does your child need to be signed up for Faith Formation? Do you want to sign up to be a catechist? Does anyone in your family want to serve for the Mass? If you plan for these things being on your calendar now, you will have a smoother transition into fall. Pay attention in the next few months as ministries begin to advertise their needs and commitments. You may be able to do more than you thought.
